Nigeria

Nigeria has the largest population of any African country. Around 186 million people live there. The capital of Nigeria is Abuja, but the largest city is Lagos. This has a population of about 20 million. The citizens of Nigeria speak more than 520 different languages. Most speak Hausa, but English is the language of government. About half of the people in Nigeria are Muslim, and nearly half are Christian. Most of the rest follow their group's traditional religion.

Kenya

Kenya is a country in East Africa. There are many rare animals in the country, and visitors come from all over the world to see them. One animal which many tourists want to see is the lion. In the whole world, there are about 20,000 lions, but in Kenya there are only 2,000. Most of Kenya's tourists come from Europe. They are very important for Kenya's economy. Each year the country earns approximately $1 billion from tourism. The cheapest time to visit is in the rainy season.

Uganda

The capital of this country in East Africa is Kampala. Uganda's capital is a modern city. It is situated near Lake Victoria, only a short distance from the equator. Most of Uganda's people are farmers. They produce either food for their own needs or for export to other countries. Coffee is the most important export crop. Each year, Uganda exports around 4.6 million kilograms of coffee. Tourism is also important for Uganda. Many tourists visit Uganda to go on safaris to see gorillas. A 12- day safari can cost around $ 8,800 per person.

Ghana

Ghana is located on the west coast of Africa. The capital and largest city of Ghana is Accra. Ghana's economy is based mostly on farming and mining. Most of the country's income comes from the sale of two products: cocoa and gold. More than half of the Ghanaian workforce works on farms. The main food crops are cassava, yams, corn, millet, sorghum, rice, bananas and plantains. Ghana also mines diamonds, manganese and bauxite. You may write your answers on the question paper, but you MUST transfer your answers to the answer sheet before the 60 minutes are over. You will NOT be given any extra time at the end to do this.

A

Africa is the second largest of Earth's seven continents, after Asia. It is often called the cradle of humanity. Most scientists believe that humans first arose in Africa long, long ago. The scientific name for human beings is Homo Sapiens. The first scientist to use this name was the Swedish botanist, Carl Linnaeus. He first used the name in 1758. Long ago, Homo Sapiens migrated, or moved, from Africa into Asia, Europe, Australia, and the Americas.

B

Today, Africa is the home of a remarkable variety of people and cultures. There are around 800 million people in Africa and they speak more than 2,000 different languages. Many people speak Swahili. There are over 100 million speakers of this language.

C

Most Africans live in rural communities. Many raise livestock or farm. Relatively few people live in cities. But Africa does have many big cities, and they are growing rapidly. These cities include Cairo in Egypt, Casablanca in Morocco, Lagos in Nigeria, and Cape Town in South Africa.

D

Africa is famous for its stunning wildlife. The continent is home to thousands of species of mammals, birds, reptiles, amphibians, fishes, and insects. There are over 1,100 different species of mammals in Africa, and over 2,600 species of birds.

E

South of the Sahara Desert, Africa teems with animal life. Wild herds of antelope, zebras, giraffes, and impalas roam across the savanna or grassland. Lions, cheetahs, and leopards feed on them. Elephants live in some forests and grasslands. Gorillas live in the rain forests of Central Africa, and also in the East African nation of Uganda.

F

Today, many of these animals are endangered. Farms and cities have replaced a lot of the land they called home. They are also hunted for trophies, meat, and sport. Many countries in Africa try to protect endangered animals, but their numbers continue to dwindle, or decrease.
